

Absolute storage success

Absolute Music, one of the UK's leading music retailers has recently moved into a new, two storey 14000 square foot superstore in Bournemouth following a comprehensive refit of their new premises with their storage systems partner Locators Ltd.

Alan Barclay, Managing Director of Absolute Music commented "Locators have supplied us with storage products and forklifts for several years so we knew who to contact when we were planning this refurbishment. Locators took responsibility for the complete project from design proposal through to installation and worked closely with the other building contractors involved."

Locators Storage Systems have extensive experience of designing and refitting offices and retail showrooms and they provide a free of charge site appraisal and design service. They worked with Absolute Music to design a mezzanine floor with access staircase and balustrade in the main retail showroom. All requirements for regulatory fire protection were incorporated into the design and the installation also included a galvanized exterior fire escape at the rear of the building.

Dave Scammell, Storage Systems Engineer for Locators remarked "We were very pleased to be asked to make our proposal and be awarded the order for this prestigious development. Our installation team delivered the project on time through careful planning and scheduling with the project management team and other trades on site."

Andy Legg, Sales Director of Absolute Music added "This project has run smoothly and delivered us a showroom we are proud of. We are very pleased with the results."
